EXAMINE YOUR TICKETS. When you come to the polls to vote, prucure your ticket of somebody you know. Do not think of voting any ticket labeled Republican that anybody may put in your hand, for there are always bogus tickets at the polls. Read your ticket through emefully, see that every Republican candidate is upon it, and that he is assigned to the proper office: see that the names of cardifates are correctly spelled and that there are no Democratic slips pasted over them, no names of Democratic candidates printed in and no blanks left, by which a good Republican will lose a vote.

Any voter can be challenged, and there ought to be no hesitation in challenging men when it is probable they have no right to yote. If any illegal voter swears in his vote notwithstanding challenge, have him arrested on the spot-

THE RIGHT OF CHALLENGS.

STAT AT THE POLIS

The success of the ticket is just as much the as much the duty of one Republican to work for that success as anoth r. When a full vote is in and a victory won, no Republican permits another to fee' good for his. Then do not simply cast your vote and go home. There will always be something about the polls you can do You may be able to influence a doubtful voter to the right side, you can help distribute tickets; you an help bring up delinquents, and even if you feel that you cannot ngage in this work, your mere presence will give confidence, and spirit to the men who do the work. We all know the effect of a tion, listless crowd about the polls DON'S TRADE VOTES.

There is always a temptation to trade votes, and it is generally the most important offices that suffer in the trade. Republicans have a good ticket this year, and they ought to vote it without any sort of dicker.
The Petroleum Tax.

The Petroleum Tax.

The Senate has amended the Hoose bill, relieving certain domestic in but tetures from tax, by ubathing one helf of the tax on petroleum and its products. As the view was chose, 122 to 20, it is not yet certain that the House will concur. But was reto hope not only that the burben upon this important interest will thus be lessened, but that it may be entirely removed. No fact is more conclusively established than that our refiners are unable to compete with the trade in Europe, who is the law now stands, can buy our exported crude oil, refine it and reading the product to this country, undersalling us in our own markets. Our own excise, the greater chapness of their own chemicals and their superior ficilities for profiting by the residua, which are of little value here, are assigned, no doubt correct the expectation to the control of the reader.

prohiting by the residua, which are of near value here, are ussigned, no doubt correctly, in explination of this rect. We understand that another delegation from the trade in this city and vicinity left for Washington last evening, for the purpose of wright, the pure last was of this branch of Home Industry.—Pittsburgh Gazette. We are reliably informed that an effort is being nade by speculators to have the tax put on crude oil again. The subject is now under discussion at Washington, and when it is remembered what difficulty was experienced in effecting the abro gation of this tax, our people may well feel con cerned at this threat of its restoration. A Committee should be at once appointed to represen the producing interest, and proceed to Washing ton without delay.

KENTUCKY POLITICS.—For the past few years Kentucky has had the bad pre eminence of being the most thoroughly Democratic State in the Union, though we believe that Maryland now contents that doubtful honor, the Union party in the last-named State having lost influence through the dissensions of its leaders. Though the future of the Republican party in Maryland cannot be regarded as very hopeful, we are pleas ed, at last, to hear good accounts from Kentucky There have been three political organization there-the Democrate, the Concervative Union ists, and the Republicans The last-pamed ha been probably the smallest of the three, and had comprised but few men of ability and influence though there were notable exceptions, as Speed McKee and Burbridge. At the last election the Republicans were confronted by the other or-ganizations, acting together, and were very bad ly beaten, as they wanted both leadership and votes. But the greatness of their victory has emboldered the returned rebels, and they speak and act so frankly that the conservative Union lets who recently voted with them are disgusted, and are leaving them this time, not to build up a third party, but to unite with the Republicans; and they will give to the Republican party just what it most needs, -leadership and infl Heretofore the Republicans have been struggling to secure a footbold in the State; but now the are firmly established, and henceforth will strive for supremacy. Of course they don't expect to carry the State this year; but they will cast larger vote at the approaching election than ever before, and it will be a vote that can be relie upon in the future, as the great body of those who held Kentucay in the Union during the war are now in its ranks

Senator except Mr. Saulabury, and was adopted. On the 15th of February Mr. Buchanan responded in a message, stating that he derived his an thority for Mr. Holt's appointment from the Act of February 13th, 1795. He also said the vacancies had been filted in this manner for sixty-five years, and gave a tabular statement of lustances which had occurred since 1829. But though he was anxious to strengthen his position with every possible historical precedent, he could not show any case in which a President had attempted to treate a vacancy by removal while the Senate was in session, and fill it with a temporary appointment. That was left for Andrew Johnson who tried it with the boldness of stupidity, with the upproval of the Democratic leaders and And for that and similar misdemennors be is now on trial before the highest tribuna known to the Government.

There is another section in the act which pro vides that "no petition or other proceedings shall be filed, received or commenced before the first day of June, 1867." But, as the final section provides that the law shall " take effect " on the second day of March, 1807, some contend that the year of grace alluded to expired on the second day of March, 1808. The simple question is-when did the act go into operation as to of preparing the machinery to put the act lat operation on the first day June, the law provided that it took effect on the second day of March 1867, and its operations in respect to debtors com menced on the first day of June, 1867.
